

CHINA, THE UN, AND THE SHIFTING GLOBAL ORDER

Gregory Chin, Department of Political Science, York University and Senior Fellow at the Centre for International Governance Innovation.

CITATIONS:

I thank Khalid Malik for sharing his knowledge on China's evolving relations with the UN.

¹ Gregory Chin, "China and the End of the G8?", Far Eastern Economic Review, December 2008 (online).

² Patricia Goff and Paul Heinbecker (eds.), Irrelevant or Indispensable?: The United Nations in the 21st Century (Waterloo: Wilfred Laurier University Press, 2005).

³ Andrew F. Cooper and Thomas Fues, "Do the Asian Drivers Pull their Diplomatic Weight?: China, India, and the United Nations", World Development, 36(2), p.294.

⁴ Mark Leonard, What Does China Think? (New York; Public Affairs, 2008), p.129.

⁵ Gregory Chin and B. Michael Frolic, "The Role of Emerging Donors in International Development Assistance: The Case of China" (policy research report commissioned by the International Development Research Centre, September 2007)